TOGETHER IN SCRIPTURE

Genesis 30:25–31:1

Context: Setting the Table

Following its magnificent introduction, Genesis divides into two unequal halves of five sections each. The first half of the book (2:4–11:26) deals with the history of humanity as a whole, from its creation to the birth of Abram. The second half of the book (11:27–50:26) focuses on the history of the patriarchs. In this week's text, Laban strikes a deal with Jacob for his continued service.

Content: Hearing the Text

Read Genesis 30:25–31:1 together out loud.

Credo: Believing the Truth

After fourteen long years of service, Jacob was more than ready to head for home—yet Laban was too stingy to give him the rightful reward that would have enabled him to do so. Forced to continue working for Laban, who continued to take advantage of him at every turn, Jacob did his best to use his stock-breeding skills to outwit his scheming uncle. Although Jacob's understanding of what was taking place was likely far from accurate, it was nevertheless his efforts that God was pleased to bless beyond his wildest dreams.

Conduct: Reshaping Our Walk

Though Jacob's efforts stock-breeding proved to be amazingly successful, his understanding of what he was doing was woefully inadequate and almost certainly misguided. Yet, at the same time, it is important to realize that the text makes it clear that the efforts he put forth did have a direct connection to the results he achieved. What Jacob likely thought was the most important part of his task (producing striped branches so that he would get striped sheep) was nothing but superstition. What perhaps seemed almost irrelevant (putting the branches into the watering troughs) was in reality the only thing that could have made a difference—one that God was pleased to bless with his almighty power. In our own lives, how might we be tempted to assume that, since we fully understand "how things work," we can guarantee the results that we crave.

Examples: Reducing the message of the Gospel to a set of "spiritual laws"; Believing that our knowledge and experience is indispensable to the accomplishment of God's purposes.

Book of the Month

Author Rosaria Butterfield shows us how God can use “radical, ordinary hospitality” to bring the gospel to our lost friends and neighbors. Such hospitality sees our homes as not our own, but as God’s tools for the furtherance of his kingdom as we welcome those who look, think, believe, and act differently from us into our everyday, sometimes messy lives—helping them see what true Christian faith really looks like.
